

FUNERAL OF REP. WEISS HELD AT WAUKEGAN TODAY

Prominent Public Figure Is Mourned by Community and State.

Funeral services for Representative William F. Weiss, for many years a unique figure in the political life of Waukegan, Lake county and the state of Illinois, are being held this afternoon at the Episcopal church in Waukegan.

Representations from the groups with which he had been associated during his life in Waukegan and his career as representative from the eighth district are to be present at the obsequies which are to be conducted by the Reverend Howard E. Ganster. These include Rep. Robt. C. Scholes of Peoria, speaker of the house of representatives, Representatives N. L. Jackson, Belvidere, L. M. Green, Rockford, Ralph Hoar, Elgin, Frank McCarthy, Elgin, Roy J. Stewart, Woodstock; city officials in a body led by Mayor Yager, the entire membership of the board of county supervisors, officers of Lake county, the Lake county bar association, Waukegan school board, chamber of commerce directors, the public school faculties and students representing each of the classes of the Junior and Senior high schools.

Death Occurred Unexpectedly.
Mr. Weiss' death was due to an injury received when he bruised his leg stepping from a platform while enroute home from the Dempsey-Tunney fight. The injury was not considered serious at first although Mr. Weiss was troubled somewhat with lameness as a result. Last Thursday friends induced him to submit to an examination, and his physician, Dr. J. J. Osgood, ordered him to bed at once. Even then his condition was not considered serious and he was engaged in conversation with Congressman-at-large Henry Rathbone when he fell into the coma which immediately preceded his sudden death which occurred at his home Monday morning.

Was Prominent in Legislature.
Representative Weiss since 1920 had been assemblyman for the eighth district and was looked upon as one of the most prominent political figures in the state. He was active in securing legislation for education. Through his agency the appropriation of $175,000 for the building of the new Fox river dam and $10,000 for the repair of the McHenry dam was obtained. He was at the time of his death fathering a movement to have Camp Logan converted into a state park.

He was also instrumental in the passage of the law increasing the speed limit of automobiles from 25 to 35 miles an hour.

In the assembly he was chairman of the house committee on education and in that capacity sponsored much legislation of importance to the public school system of the state. Besides his chairmanship he was a member of many important committees and had served as temporary speaker of the house.

He had made a record for himself in politics as a sponsor of the dry faction and for many years was associated with the anti-saloon league.

For some years he had served as chairman of the county central republican committee and had long been a power in politics in Lake county. He was elected to office the last time by an overwhelming vote and indications were that his re-election in the coming campaign would be by even a larger majority.

Mr. Weiss had served for many years as both a member of the Waukegan Township high school and the Waukegan city school board and was regarded as father of the bond issue. He was an enthusiastic supporter of school athletics and was responsible for the securing of the new athletic field for the Waukegan school.

Began Political Career Early.

The deceased was born in Chicago on June 30, 1875, and received his early education in the schools there. Later he removed with his parents to a farm on the Milford road near Waukegan. In his youth he held a minor position in the office of the treasurer of Cook county. He was admitted to the bar in 1897 and a year later was married and moved to Waukegan where he entered the practice of law. His career in the law was a memorable one. He made a reputation for himself in several

High School Patrons To Hear Addresses By Noted Speakers

The parents and other patrons of the schools of this community are to have the privilege of discussing and hearing discussed the problems that arise in their relations with the boys and girls. This meeting will be held at the high school next Monday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

There are to be two speakers for the meeting, both of whom have been in this type of work for years. Mrs. Howell has addressed more than 500 high schools and probably understands the problems of the teen age better than any other person. She will speak on the "Psychology of Youth." Mrs. Howell will be assisted by Dr. Yarrow, superintendent of the Illinois Vigilance association, who will approach the problem from the viewpoint of the boys, using as his subject "The Moral Tendencies of the Present."

Mrs. Howell and Dr. Yarrow will talk to the high school students during the day. The teachers of the high school asked these speakers to come to Antioch and there will be no charge for the meetings.

ANTIOCH T. H. S. WINS 3RD GAME OF FOOTBALL SEASON

Waukegan Second Heavies
Fail to Score on Local Aggregation

Last Friday Waukegan's second heavyweight team came to Antioch for their return game and although they were set to stop the locals the final score was Antioch 25, Waukegan 0.

This is the third game the locals have held their opponents scoreless showing that the entire line is working hard on defense and the backfield is knocking down or intercepting most of the forward passes that come their way.

The offensive work of the Antioch team was not as good as the week before at Barrington but after a slow start they were able to carry the ball across for four touchdowns. Spicer scored two of these, Michell one and Steinger one. Spicer's punting, Steinger's passing and Michell's line plunges featured this game.

The Waukegan team played much better football than they did on their own field two weeks before but they were unable to push over a score.

On Friday of this week Arlington Heights comes to Antioch for the locals second conference game and it will be a hard one, for Heights held Libertyville to a 6 to 0 score last week and they will also be out to revenge the defeat of last season.

Repair Work on McHenry Dam Soon Complete

Work was begun last week and is nearly completed on the repairing of the dam in the Fox river south of McHenry. The operations are in charge of the Matthews-Tonyan company and consist in the driving in of Wakefield sheet piling, the pouring in of cement on the dam wall itself and of placing a curved concrete apron below the dam so that the water in falling over the dam will drop into shallow water rather than onto the river bed. Below the apron stones are being placed in order to keep the water from washing back the river bed and undermining the dam.

The building and repairing of the dam was made possible by an appropriation sponsored by the late Representative Wm. F. Weiss, and passed in the last legislature at the same time that the Weiss bill providing for a new dam above the old one.

Bankers Protest Withdrawal of Treasurer's Funds From County

Lake County Bankers through their executive committee, which met at Highland Park Tuesday evening, voiced a protest against the action of the board of county supervisors in removing the county funds from the banks of the county and depositing them in the First National Bank of Chicago.

The resolution passed by the board last Friday provided that the county funds should be deposited in one of three Chicago organizations and that henceforth banks of the county should be required to make request in writing to the board if they desired to be used as depositories of county funds.

Financiers Say Banks Adequate.

Protest was made by the bankers because it was felt that the action of the board reflected upon the ability of the county institutions to handle the county funds. The resolution provided that the amount of county money that a Lake county bank can handle should be limited to half of the capital and surplus of the bank applying.

Increase the county funds total more than the amount which can be divided proportionately among the Lake county banks, under the limitation, the balance will be placed in a Chicago bank.

The bankers protested this provision and maintained that as depositories of public funds the banks of the county are safer than any of the Chicago institutions. It was pointed out that all of the Chicago banks mentioned as satisfactory depositories carry a much larger deposit to proportion to their capital and surplus than does any bank in Lake county, and that the county institutions are

Data on Problem of Flood Control Asked By Congressman Reid

Information in regard to the problem of flood control is asked by Congressman Frank R. Reid in a letter to the News written from his office in Washington this week. Mr. Reid is chairman of the house committee on Flood Control and he is asking for information on the subject in order that data may be presented to congress at the coming session.

The Fox river system is one of a chain of rivers emptying their waters into the Illinois and thence into the great Mississippi, and Congressman Reid, in his work on the Flood Control committee, is in a position to know the vital importance of the retention and control in the upper reaches of the system, of the waters of the Fox and similar rivers.

Rep. Reid says:

"As chairman of the Committee on Flood Control of the House of Representatives, I have issued a call for an unofficial meeting of the committee to be held in Washington Monday, November 7th, to take up the question of flood control on the Mississippi river. I believe that by getting the committee together before the convening of Congress many preliminary matters can be disposed of and unnecessary delay avoided."

"I would like to include in the record of the committee hearings a statement to show the wide publicity given the subject of floods and flood control so that the members of Congress will be more thoroughly impressed with the widespread interest in the subject, and realize that they are expected to act and act promptly. I will greatly appreciate it if you will have prepared and sent to me a statement regarding your publication."

"I would be pleased to have any suggestions that occur to you that would be helpful in framing legislation to prevent the recurrence of flood disasters; and if any of your articles would be of value to the committee, I wish you would give me the dates of these articles so that I can secure copies of them."

Roy Waterman Secured
As Judge of Show.

Work on the final arrangement for this year's greatest farm event has progressed to a point where committees are completing their work and getting everything in readiness for the big days of Nov. 10, 11, and 12.

It is expected that approximately 700 birds will be on exhibit from all parts of Lake county. A new feature this year will be a pullet sale of about 400 pullets on Nov. 12. These were raised by the boys and girls in the 411 Poultry Clubs of Lake county and represent some of the best breeding stock of the county. Anyone needing pullets should be at the sale.

Roy Waterman who judges poultry at the Central States Exposition at Aurora each year has been secured as judge.

People who are interested in showing should write for entry blanks and premium lists to C. L. Kudt, Secretary, Antioch, Ill.

Merchants of Antioch and Lake Villa are cooperating to make this year's event the greatest ever. Antioch merchants are considering having a "Dollar Day" at that time and the school board will hold "Open House." The show will be held in the new gymnasium of the high school and the rest of the building will be open for inspection on one of the three days.

American Legion Notes (By the American Legion.)

Thursday, October 27, 1927, the anniversary of the birth of Theodore Roosevelt has been chosen by the President of the United States as "Navy Day." On that day all loyal Americans will honor and celebrate the birthday of Theodore Roosevelt who did so much to put the U. S. Navy on an equal footing with the other great Powers. Great Lakes will hold open house that day. There will be exhibits, sham battles, parades, athletic contests, and prominent speakers will be present. School children from a radius of a hundred miles have been invited to attend, and with good weather everyone is assured a good time without any expense. The Legion desires this information passed on to all members and others, and all are invited to come and get acquainted with the Nation's First Line of Defense—the Navy.

Well, Wauconda is assured a post at last—49 leading Legionnaires went there October 8 and signed up sufficient men to make application for a charter.

Are there any other places in the county where Posts should be started? Lake Villa, Zion, Winthrop Harbor, Fox Lake, or anywhere else? You know we must put on 1000 new members this year and we will have to comb the highways and byways very fine to obtain our objective. Give us your ideas on the subject.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"DOCTRINE OF ATONEMENT" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, October 16.

The Golden Text was from Galatians 2:20. "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me; and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me."

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "And all things are of God, who hath reconciled us to himself by Jesus Christ, and hath given to us the ministry of reconciliation: Now then we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us; we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God" (II Cor. 5:18, 20).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The atonement of Christ reconciles man to God, not God to man; for the divine Principle of Christ is God, and how can God prophesize Himself? Christ is Truth, which reaches no higher than itself. The fountain can rise no higher than its source" (p. 18).

THE STORY

CHAPTER I.—From the comfortable financial situation to which he had been born, Peter Milman, American gentleman of the old school, and last of his family, had practically been reduced to poverty through the misfortune of a friend, Haxson Brewer, whom he had unwisely trusted.

CHAPTER II.—Learning of Brewer's suicide, which made the destruction of his last hope, Milman engages a French butler, Achille Lutry, who speaks no English, and is to replace Speed, servant of long standing. By Lutry, Milman sends letters to Prof. Fleming Bradley, Floyd Malet and Neeland Barnes, men whom the world has classed as failures, once of high position, in response, the three call on him at his home.

CHAPTER III.—After an ecstatic dinner Milman takes his guests into his Japanese garden, where, after each has related the circumstances which wrecked their careers, he convinces them their misfortunes are due to the traceable to the machinations of an unseen, unscrupulous enemy, a man who had risen to high financial position and political power by underhanded methods, chiefly blackmail, Paul Haxson. Haxson also ruined Brewer, and incidentally Milman.

CHAPTER IV.—Milman explains to his guests how he has been through his life in Floyd Malet as a great sculptor and the victim of malevolent circumstances, he had subscribed to a press-circulating bureau and kept a detective on Haxson's track, learning much to Haxson's discredit, though nothing by which he could be reached legally. Himself impoverished through Haxson's financial crookedness, Milman proposes an association of the four men—an association outside the law—which shall pull down Haxson and force him to disgorge his ill-gotten financial gains.

CHAPTER V.—Following Milman's disclosures, his three guests, after a consultation, practically decide to join him in the fight against Paul Haxson. Milman explains his idea, admitting he has no real plan to bring about Haxson's downfall, except discreditable details about his personal and business life which he has gleaned from Herman Loddon, Haxson's tool on occasions when wine has loosened Loddon's tongue.

CHAPTER VI.—Haxson's political ambition is the national senatorship from his state. McKimber is the admitted party nominee, and must be eliminated. At his palatial residence, Great Rock, Haxson plans elaborate entertainments in his political interests. Returning to his humble abode, Neeland Barnes finds his daughter, Anita, who had been living with relatives in England. Having no at home for the girl, Barnes takes her to Milman's, where she is welcomed as a guest. Overhearing the plans of the "conspirators," Anita arranges to join them, assuring them of her confidence she can be of use.

CHAPTER VII.—Miss Brown, aware of her shortcomings as a society hostess, falls in with her husband's idea of hiring a well-bred woman and giving her full charge of the household. She engages a "Miss Agatha Brown" (really Miss Anita Barnes) to take charge. The girl arranges for the employment of her father and Professor Bradley as butlers in the Haxson household, and the "association" awaits developments.

CHAPTER VIII.—Haxson's daughters, personally unattractive, are at once jealous of Anita. Speed, Milman's former butler, is engaged for the same position by Haxson. With their son (Robin), Mr. and Mrs. Haxson are guests of the Haxson. Robin at once falls in love with Anita and proposes marriage. The girl refuses him, aware that his father would oppose his son's marriage to a penniless, unknown girl. Neeland Barnes and Bradley arrange a hiding place from which to spy on Haxson in his "den."

Miss Brown had a maslin and was practicing short approaches.

"Of all the nerve!" said Gertrude Haxson. "I'll see mother steps that. She can't learn how to play golf here."

Robin watched Miss Brown swing. The ball cleared three pine-trees and nestled within putting distance of the hole. As pretty a stroke as he, a scratch man, could ever hope to make.

"I imagine she has learnt a good bit of golf somewhere else," he said dryly. Gertrude Haxson became more and more distrustful to him. She was an empty-headed little flirt and could not interest him. As soon as he could he went back to his room.

His reward came at dinner. Miss Brown was there, quite well dressed. They were not introduced, and she sat some distance from him. Robin determined to get an introduction after dinner.

After dinner came a dance, and the evasion of the two elder Haxson girls was not easy. Robin looked sourly at an animated and gesticulating Frenchman—a viscount, as he recalled it—who carried on a long conversation in his native tongue with Miss Brown.

Only once Robin stared into the violet eyes. They seemed to look through him. But he was sure Miss Brown remembered that moment when there was a reasonably good chance of the extinction of the McKimber family. He wished he could dance with her. He detected very small clinging girls like Gertrude Haxson. And after he was himself dark, he preferred the blonde type. Of course the Haxson girls were jealous. And well they might be. Probably Miss Brown had a hard time to please the faries her charms and beauty aroused in her employer's daughters.

Finally poor Robin had to introduce himself. He did it very well. It came in the nature of an apology. Robin was so good-looking that most girls forgave him minor breaches of etiquette.

"My name is Robin McKimber," he began. "And as I know you are Miss Brown, we are introduced, aren't we?" "And this is your idea of an introduction?" Miss Brown spoke without enthusiasm. He was a little staggered. His smile was what people usually termed infectious.

"I had to introduce myself," he returned, "because nobody else would." "Exactly what was the necessity?" she demanded.

"I wanted to apologize for nearly running you down on the drive this afternoon." She was not making it easy.

"I'm afraid you exaggerate," she said calmly. "I was standing on a rock fully two feet above the road level when you turned the corner so recklessly." His face fell. She could not help smiling a little. "But, of course, if you really do want to apologize for being so careless—"

"I do," he said earnestly. "Then you must apologize to your parents. They were in real danger and I was not."

"I'm a most careful driver," he said. "Ask my mother. What happened to day never happened to me before."

"What was that?" There was a trace of a smile which passed over her face and was gone.

"I saw that eyes could really be violent," he answered. He looked into them admiringly. "I forgot everything."

"You should lose your license," she said severely. But there was no doubt that she smiled as she turned away with a slight bow.

She was more used to verbal fencing than he had imagined. On the whole, he decided he had behaved very stupidly. This was no browbeaten dependent thirsting for kind words. Robin's evening was spoiled.

John McKimber was puzzled concerning Paul Haxson. He had known of Haxson for years, but he had never met him nor believed very much in his influence. McKimber had thought of him as a younger man who would look up to him as one having long ago won his spurs. McKimber had come here sure that victory would be his in the struggle.

He was uneasily aware that Haxson was not easy to impress. The younger man's knowledge of politics and politicians seemed uncanny. He was without reverence for the dead or respect for the living. Once or twice McKimber believed his host was laughing at him. It would not be advisable to start any serious discussions until the two were on more friendly terms.

Haxson's would not be the first political aspirations that McKimber had nipped in the bud. That was the duty of all sound machine politicians or popular government might creep in and destroy the machinery. Haxson would see he was wrong to impair his party because of his new-born ambitions. For almost a generation now John McKimber had been the mainstay of his party in his own section of the state. If honors were to be awarded it was to him they should come. Haxson would probably see it in that light. If he did not there would be summoned the big men who must be obeyed.

Haxson had two big rooms for himself in a tower from which an unobscured view of the sound could be enjoyed. One of the rooms was a library, deep-paneled and splendid. The other was his bedroom and bath. To this retreat none came but the servants. Here he dreamed of power and planned the new life. None could overhear what he would say to McKimber when the hour came to which he had long looked forward. There would be no tinkling telephones to interrupt. He chuckled as he thought of McKimber. He knew the manufacturer for an honest if stubborn man, who had long been regarded as a valued party prop. Well, the McKimber who would come to this talk would not be the man who went down the tower stairs.

Life had been very good to Paul Haxson. He had always won. Again and again his unfortunate entanglements with women had threatened to bring him newspaper notoriety, but he had evaded it—somehow. He wondered why, of late, he had been thinking of the girl who died so conveniently in a sculptor's studio, the sculptor who had endured the censure that should have been his. Haxson believed that it was because he had been born to a great destiny, and doubts of future success did not trouble him.

McKimber broached the subject that filled their minds one day as they walked back from golf. He had been shown by his campaign manager that Haxson's press notices far exceeded his own in frequency and interest.

"You certainly have a fine press agent," McKimber said, not without bitterness.

"The best," said Haxson. "So long as he remains the best he gets a very large salary. If he falls off, I shall get rid of him. He knows that. One night say," Haxson went on, "that thou is my method always. I pay more than the union scale, because I want a result above the average."

"Maybe you're wasting your money," Haxson shrugged his shoulders. "Maybe."

"The public buildings of this country are the best in the world," McKimber declared. He had been reading something of the enthusiasm Haxson had created among federations of women's clubs.

"You probably think so," Haxson agreed jolly. "You could sit before the whitehouse at, let us say, Harrisburg, and think it was the last thing in architectural art. I am going to stamp out monstrosities in stone and metal dramas in marble. We have not yet evolved a national style, but we shall."

He paused a moment to greet Robin McKimber and Agatha Brown. He had noticed of late that the two were very friendly. They made a splendid pair. He commented on it. McKimber grinned. He had other plans for his son. He found himself filled with increasing bitterness.

"When can we have a talk?" McKimber said abruptly.

"What are we doing now?"

"You know what I mean. I'm going to let you into our confidence, and you ought to know that strangers shouldn't hear it."

"Maybe You're Wasting Your Money."

"Whose confidence?"

"The party's confidence. It's a big thing, Haxson."

"Ought I to hear it? Am I important enough?" Haxson's manner had no hint of sarcasm in it, but McKimber knew that the other was laughing at him. "Tomorrow night the young people are having a dance. I keep late hours. What about midnight? You have never yet been in my tower study, have you? Speed shall bring you up there at twelve."

McKimber felt himself dismissed. He frowned as he glanced at the smaller man. The interview in the tower room would need careful handling. He wondered if he had underestimated Haxson.

When Robin joined him McKimber was still frowning. Unwisely he told his son of the coming interview, but not of its nature. Still more anxiously Robin, by this time head over ears in love with Agatha Brown, confided in her news. She had always seemed ready to chat about his parents.

"I don't understand it at all," said Robin. "Father came here for some purpose of his own which I haven't caught on to, but it's political. Of course you haven't followed American politics of late or you'd know my father was some pinkie up the state. He refused the nomination for governorship."

"Why such modesty?" she asked. "Because he wants something bigger."

"The senate, I suppose?"

"Yes. I wondered why it was he came here when we have never had any social relations with the Haxsons. I know now." He spoke confidentially. "Tomorrow night, up in his tower room, father is going to lay down the law to your Mr. Haxson. Just because Haxson made a lot of money doesn't say he is fit to represent New York at Washington. I think father pays entirely too much attention to Hax-son's claims. He wouldn't get to you sibly. What do you think?"

"That politics is very dull."

"They won't bother us," he said ten derly. "We shall know they exist."

"That will make you a very agreeable dancing partner," she laughed. She sighed a little. "I'm sorry, Robin, but we shall not be dancing together tomorrow evening. It is my night off, and I'm going to see some friends in New York."

"I'll come with you," he said eagerly. "Do let me drive you in."

"That would never do. I should be dismissed directly I returned. No, you must stay here and dance with the Haxson girls and their friends. Don't you realize how much you've neglected them?"

"I didn't come here to dance with them," he retorted. "I came in the first instance because father has something to tell Haxson from the national committee. I stayed because I saw you. If I've neglected the Haxson girls it is absolutely your fault. They should blame you for it."

"They do," she answered. "Mrs. Haxson, who was my friend, is growing cold. I shall not be here long."

"Then marry me and get a lifelong job. You'll like it, sweetheart. I'm not half good enough for you, but day by day you'll learn to love me more and more."

"Is this a proposal?" She laughed. "It's the first I've made since lunch," he returned.

"And I shall give you my usual answer. I like you, Robin. You are one of the most attractive people I have met. I think it would not be hard to get absolutely crazy about you."

"How soon can you start?"

"I'm afraid I never can. Your father wouldn't permit it. I've watched him, Robin, when you've been dancing or talking to me. Do you suppose it was just idly that he told me last night that he had a great future planned for you?"

"He often says that," Robin answered. "That's why he wants to go to Washington. He's thinking of politics and diplomacy."

"He was thinking of the sort of woman he intends you to marry. I can't blame him. He feels he is fighting for you against an unknown woman who may be a common adventuress for all he knows. On the whole, I rather like your father."

"The old man's all right," Robin said calmly, "and I probably respect him more than anyone else; but I'm no Chinese ancestor worshiper. I shall choose my own wife. If he objects, the loss is his."

"You'd starve, my bold and brave Robin."

"Not on your life, Amethysta. I'm no idle society boy, although I play society games. I've an interest in the works which I earned. He'd have to buy me out, and it would be cheaper to have me remain. Also, I control some little patents that he uses. I invented them, if you can believe it."

"How clever of you," she cried. "Do you know I had no idea you had ever worked. You play so well, you see."

"Amethysta," he said earnestly, "there isn't such an awful lot of happiness in this world. Why do you want to rob me of my chance of it?"

"If there was anything I could do to make you happy I would do it if I had myself only to think about. Don't follow me. I've got to get back to the house and arrange an elaborate menu."

not easy to restrain to it. So far in his life young McKimber had obtained what he wanted. He realized that he had never wanted anything very strongly until now, when his first serious defeat had been met.

Inside the house Agatha Brown met Henry.

"You allow that McKimber boy to monopolize too much of your time," he grumbled; "the McKimbres are absolutely without social weight."

"In so many words that is what Mr. McKimber told Robin about social secretaries. Don't talk about him now. I've got to go into New York and see Uncle Peter."

"Anything developed?" he demanded eagerly.

"Yes. At midnight tomorrow—there's a big dance here you remember. Mr. McKimber is going to see Mr. Haxson and tell him he has no chance politically."

"How do you know that? So you are pumping him. Clever girl. That's why you are letting him waste his time."

"It's not being clever," she returned, flushing; "it's being dishonorable. I'm not pumping him. I'm letting him talk, and that's almost as bad."

The man who was Henry seemed little interested in Robin McKimber. He was excited at the idea of the interview on the morrow.

"I believe that's the big thing," he said. "I wish I knew what old Peter has up his sleeve."

"Has Mr. Bradley finished his work up there?" she asked.

"This very morning. That's the real reason I waited for you. That d—d Haxson has no fixed habits. He crops in in most unexpected places. Speed reported after breakfast that he and old McKimber were on the way. Henry got busy at once with his job and I attended to the cleaning of the room. I didn't hear Haxson come in. You know how silently he walks. Suddenly I looked around and saw him. He made a motion for me not to say anything. He was listening. "Henry laughed. "I didn't laugh then, Nita. What do you think it was? He thought all Bradley sawing a board out of sight was a rat. Fortunately Bradley had just finished and was listening to what we were saying. Haxson's afraid of no man, but he hates rats. He made me look down behind the books. I could see Bradley's face distinctly, because he hadn't quite finished. I was flustered. I said I saw a big sewer rat."

"Poor Uncle Fleming," Nita cried. "Oh, daddy, what a situation!"

"Haxson suggested sending for a fox terrier that the head chauffeur owns. Any decent dog would have worried Bradley's face to ribbons. I couldn't have that. I suggested traps and said the 'legions' had a bait that old Henry the Eighth used. He said the rat would take it and die in such a way that the rat would be poisoned. He went to a drawer and took out an automatic. I thought then and there everything was up. I couldn't let him take a pot-shot at Bradley. Remember, Bradley was listening to all this and not able to make a move."

Bush O. K. for 1928

So far as Barney Dreyfuss, president of the Pittsburgh baseball club, is concerned, Donie Bush can manage the Pirates again next year.

Commenting on rumors that Bush was not to be retained at the close of the present season, Dreyfuss said that "In my eyes, Bush has been a successful manager this year, and I have not thought of changing pilots for 1928."

Announcement is made of the sale to the Chicago Cubs of Fred (Doc) Musgrave, star second baseman of the league-leading Toledo team of the American association.

HOLD A TRUMP CARD

Farmer A sold his crop in September when everybody else was selling and the price was down. Farmer B had money in the bank and was able to hold his crop until prices advanced.

The difference between Farmer A and Farmer B is that B held a trump card to use in this emergency. We can't all be as fortunate or as forehanded as Farmer B, but we can try to be.

Every person ought to make every effort possible to provide himself with a cash reserve fund to use only in emergencies. Having such a reserve fund is the result more frequently of being forehanded than fortunate.

WEISS IS MOURNED BY CONSTITUENCY

Instances, and in 1916 his ability was recognized by Attorney General Brundage who appointed him as assistant attorney general. He held this office until 1920 when he resigned to run for representative. He was associated for many years in the practice of law with Arthur Buckley, now corporation counsel.

Loss to Entire State.

Mr. Weiss is survived by his wife and one daughter, Miss Florence Weiss, who is an instructor in the Waukegan township high school.

Funeral services at the Episcopal church this afternoon are open to the public, and there will be a private service at the grave. Business associates will act as pallbearers. They are Judge C. C. Edwards, Judge Martin U. Becker, Attorney Ralph J. Brady, Attorney Clarence Diver, John Reardon and George Willison of Chicago, the last mentioned being a former state representative with whom Mr. Weiss was very friendly.

Telegrams expressing sympathy have been pouring into the home.

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Kuhl motored to Madison Saturday to see the Wisconsin-Michigan football game.

since late Monday from the many friends Mr. Weiss had made during his career. Organizations with which he was associated, numbering practically all of the civic and educational enterprises in the city of Waukegan, have expressed their sympathy and appreciation of his character, and his unexpected death has given pause to the business and social life of Waukegan and the constituency which he represented in his public career.

Mrs. Chas. Dippe Dies In Home At Salem After Long Illness

Mrs. Amelia Dippe, age 67 years, wife of Charles Dippe, died last week at her home in Salem after a long illness. Mrs. Dippe had been a patient sufferer for many weeks.

Mrs. Dippe was born in Germany December 14th, 1859. She was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Christian Malsalin. She came to America during her girlhood and lived in Missouri for a number of years. After moving from there she lived for a time in Milwaukee, later in English Prairie, and subsequently moved to Salem where she had since made her home.

Her husband, Chas. Dippe survives her. Two children died in infancy. Funeral services were held at the home in Salem Saturday afternoon.

METHODIST CHURCH NOTES.

The Methodist church choir was very much in evidence at the weekly rehearsal Wednesday evening held at the parsonage. It is hoped that before long the choir will be ready to sing at both services each Sunday.

Now that the summer rush is past a good number of folks are finding time to attend church. Last Sunday the attendance at both services was most gratifying. The sermon theme for the morning worship next Sunday will be "A Fresh Start." It is a timely topic and will be very helpful. You will not regret having heard this sermon. The evening service is at 7:30 o'clock. The first of a series of sermons on Paul's letters to the Corinthians will be preached at this time. Through the course of the winter the entire book will be covered.

The Sunday school, which through the summer was somewhat handicapped, is now well-run and each pupil will find helpful instruction during the period which opens at 9:45. Parents are urged to come and bring their children. There are classes for both young and old.

Tuesday, Nov. 1, has been set aside for the annual church day celebration. It is the 46th anniversary of the founding of the Methodist church in Antioch. Plan to meet with us on that night.

St. Ignatius Church Notes (Episcopal)

19th Sunday after Trinity—Kalendar.

9:45—Sunday School.

11:00—Matins and Sermon.

Next Sunday the pastor will begin a series of sermons on the meaning of the ten commandments. Next Sunday the first four, "Our Duty to God—1. Religion, 2. Worship, 3. Reverence, 4. Consecration."

From Sunday to Nov. 6 the Rev. Fr. Harrison, of the order of the Holy Cross, will conduct a mission at St. Lawrence's church, Libertyville. Service every evening at 7:30. It is to be hoped that many who are interested in the message of the church and its relation to modern life make an effort to attend some of these meetings. Fr. Harrison is one of the outstanding leaders of the church. For many years before entering the ministry he was a successful lawyer in New York City. He gave up all to serve the church and entered the Order of the Holy Cross, a group of clergymen and laymen who consecrate themselves in a special way to complete service of the church without pay of any sort. He was for some time in charge of the church's missionary work in Liberia, Africa. The Young People's Bible Class is studying the ten religions of the world, and every religion is given its just deserts, pro and con. We ought to know why we are Christians. Most people don't know, and that is why they are such weak Christians. Give seasons of the faith that is within you. Friday, the 28th, the Ladies Guild will give a card party at the Parish house. There will be lots of fun for all. Save the date.
